SURVIVOR SEARCH SLOWED

Officials said Monday that they believe 29 people are missing from the wrecked cruise ship Costa Concordia. GETTY IMAGES

HOPES DIM FOR ANY LEFT ON SUBMERGED CRUISE SHIP

Reuters

GIGLIO, Italy A stricken Italian cruise liner shifted on its rocky resting place Monday as worsening weather disrupted an increasingly despairing hunt for survivors, and authorities raised their estimate of the number missing to 29 people.

As the Costa Concordia's owners blamed their captain for veering shorewards on Friday in a "salute" to residents of a Tuscan island, the giant ship slid a little, threatening to plunge its whole gigantic carcass and 2,300 metric tons of fuel below the Mediterranean waters of the surrounding nature reserve.

The slippage forced rescuers to suspend for a few hours their efforts to find anyone still alive after three days in the capsized hull, resting on a jagged slope outside the picturesque harbor on the island of Giglio. Six bodies have been found. Most of the 4,200 passengers and crew survived, despite hours of chaos.

An Italian coast guard official told Reuters late Monday that the number of people missing had been revised to 29—25 passengers and four members of staff—from 16, showing how much uncertainty still surrounded the disaster. Another maritime official said later that 10 Germans were thought to be among the missing passengers.

The Italian cruise ship that flipped on its side Friday could cost insurers between $600 million and $800 million, businessweek.com reported Monday, citing analyst estimates.

The ship, one of the biggest passenger vessels ever to be wrecked, foundered after striking a rock just as dinner was being served Friday night. It quickly rolled on its side, revealing a long gouge below the waterline.

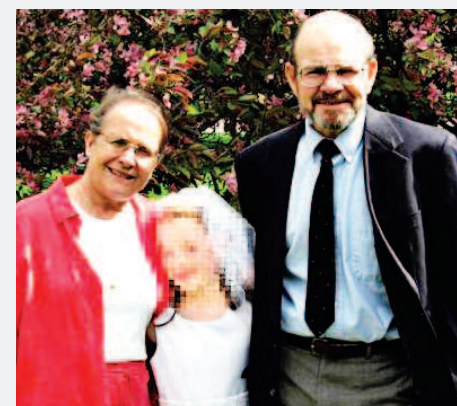

Firefighters spokesman Luca Cari said there were still small movements of the vessel but they were not considered dangerous. However, searches were suspended overnight and would resume at daybreak.

Another senior firefighter, Luciano Roncalli, told Reuters that all the unsubmerged areas of the liner had been searched, indicating faint hopes of finding more survivors in the flooded and upturned maze of luxurious state rooms and tennis courts, bars and spas that are now submerged beneath the sea.

Environment Minister Corrado Clini said he would declare a state of emergency because of the risk that the ship's fuel would leak into the pristine Tuscan Archipelago National Park. No fuel spillage has been detected so far, he said on an Italian TV show.

Should rougher seas dislodge the wreck and cause it to sink or break up, that could scupper any hopes for the owners, a unit of Florida's Carnival Corp., of salvaging a liner which cost hundreds of millions of dollars to build just six years ago.

Chicago-area man's parents missing

Chicago Tribune

The Chicago-area son of an American couple missing from a capsized Italian cruise ship remained hopeful Monday that his parents would be found.

John Heil, of Mount Prospect, issued a statement on behalf of the family confirming that his parents, Barbara and Gerald Heil, are the two Americans missing from the Costa Concordia.

Barbara and Gerald Heil live in White Bear Lake, Minn., north of St. Paul.

"We are waiting patiently for the rescuers to safely try to find our parents," John Heil, 42, said in the statement. "Our prayers and thoughts are with our parents, those others that are still missing and their families, and the brave rescuers. We are working closely with the U.S. Embassy in Italy and are confident that everything is being done to find our parents."

CTA signals turn toward efficiency

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 » tswartz
 @tribune.com
 » @tracyswartz

This could be the end of the whine for some CTA riders.

The CTA board approved contracts last week for consultants to evaluate the current set of CTA schedules to determine if the agency is operating as efficiently and fairly as it could be.

The CTA says it evaluates schedules throughout the year and makes changes based on seasonal trends. But CTA President Forrest Claypool said researchers with Northwestern and Navigant, a Chicago-based business consulting firm, will start from scratch in assessing transit operations. Their contracts are not to exceed $310,000.

Claypool said this move does not mean service cuts are in the near future. Still, CTA management and the unions have to come to an agreement soon on proposed worker concessions or service cuts will be a possibility for this year.

Claypool said the researchers will primarily crunch data to determine where the CTA can improve efficiency.

Data is a good way to learn about problems associated with certain bus routes, such as the No. 66-Chicago buses, which suffer from overcrowding. An even better way is to take these buses in rush hour and see where the problems occur.

On Chicago Avenue, the No. 66 slows as it makes its way through downtown because of car traffic and foot traffic from riders transferring to and from the Red and Brown lines.

The frequent stopping by the No. 66 leads to bus bunching and gaps in service, making it one of the CTA's most problematic lines.

Other areas the researchers should evaluate, hopefully in-person and not just from a computer screen:

» Train overcrowding: Every year the Cubs and Sox play baseball, and every year the Red Line trains become unbearable before and after games. Surely there is a fix for this. Other hot spots for overcrowding: rush-hour trains and Blue and Orange line trains to the airports during the summer.

» Return of express buses: A bus rapid transit pilot along Jeffery Boulevard is set to begin this year. These buses are supposed to have priority at traffic lights and bus-only lanes.

In the meantime, the researchers may want to look at how much it would cost to bring back some or all of the nine express bus routes shuttered during service cuts in 2010. It may help shift some of the crowding on the trains to the buses and end some of the whining.

CTA card giveaway

Follow me @tracyswartz on Tuesday. To celebrate riding all 139 CTA bus routes from end to end, I'll be giving away a CTA card worth $139 to the 139th person who tweets me their favorite bus route. Counting begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 11:59 p.m.

Card, credit union

Until Feb. 29, riders who sign up for a joint Chicago Card Plus I-Go card to use on the CTA and in I-GO car sharing vehicles will receive $50 in transit credit and a discounted I-GO membership. Go to igocars.org/how for information.

BUS

Catfights, litterbugs and pajama pants: Hey, you don't ride every CTA route without coming away with a few stories

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

» tswartz@tribune.com
» @tracyswartz

It's been real, y'all.

No, seriously, it doesn't get more real than this. Since April 2009, I've been riding one CTA bus a week, end to end, in an attempt to travel every CTA bus route. I finally finished last month—after 139 bus trips.

I started this project when I took over as RedEye's CTA columnist as a way to get to know the transit system. In the end, I got to know Chicago and its residents—some in embarrassingly intimate ways.

I've been spit on and hit on. I've sat in urine and sunflower seeds. I've traveled through marsh and wooded areas just to get to bus stops—only to wait 20 minutes for the next bus.

WHAT YOUR BUS LINE REALLY SAYS ABOUT YOU

NO. 36-BROADWAY: You have a sense of adventure and may have lost the rest of your sense.

NO. 56-MILWAUKEE: You're too cool for the bus. Shouldn't you be on a bike?

NO. 29-STATE: Your jams are all slow.

NO. 66-CHICAGO: You are a patient person. You would be the voice of reason on a reality show.

STAR

I've run into traffic to catch a bus. I've gotten lost in the suburbs. I've gotten lost in the city.

I've perfected the move-to-the-back dance on a crowded bus. I've learned how to pretend it's warm at a bus stop. I've learned how to make extra space when there doesn't seem to be any.

I've witnessed arguments. I've been yelled at. I've been in an accident.

I've thought of Union Station, Jefferson Park and 95th Street as second homes. I've seen the early morning gleam of Lake Michigan from an express bus. I've toured Northwestern and the University of Chicago without having to enroll.

In short, I've learned the importance of buses in this city. There were 306 million bus boardings in 2010—compared with 210 million rail boardings. Yet the bus system, which covers nearly 2,000 miles and more than 11,000 stops, is not as efficient as the train system.

The CTA faces obstacles with construction, overcrowding, traffic and service cuts based on its budget.

There are few bus-only lanes in the city, so buses jockey with cars for space on overly crowded streets. Traffic is unavoidable. So is construction. Detours for construction, especially in the summer, mean longer trips and more confusion for riders. Sometimes even the bus drivers are confused by the new routes.

CTA riders also face challenges.

Unlike at train stations, there are no heat lamps at bus stops. And a schedule can change at any minute whether it's the CTA's fault (poor scheduling leading to bus bunching) or not (a driver waiting at a green light as riders fumble for fare).

The future is unclear as well. Since I started this project, the CTA has cut bus service by 18 percent while rail service was reduced by 9 percent. Express bus routes have been shuttered. In response, bus riders have become rail riders.

On the upside, the CTA and the city have devised plans to start express service along busy corridors such as Western Avenue. These plans include bus-only lanes and traffic signal priorities. Express buses could shave minutes off travel time, the CTA says.

I look forward to this becoming reality. Because for more than 2½ years, my reality could be a show called "My Slow-Called Life."

King holiday marked by march

Chicago Tribune

The Chicago Teachers Union and community groups fighting Chicago Public Schools' efforts to close down or turn around failing schools marked the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday with protests on the West and Southwest sides.

Nearly 400 teachers, parents and education activists marched to Marquette Park from Marquette Elementary School, which is slated to be taken over this year by the nonprofit Academy for Urban School Leadership in a proposed "turnaround," a process in which all school staff are replaced with new teachers and administrators.

In 1966, King marched through Marquette Park to protest housing segregation. On Monday, protesters held their march to fight for what CTU President Karen Lewis called "education justice."

"What we're seeing is our neighborhood schools being starved, and schools on an upward trend being snatched for a turnaround," Lewis said. "There's new political change in the city, but we're going back to the old way of doing things."

The CTU and community groups fighting against school closings maintain the district should be investing resources into underperforming neighborhood schools, rather than closing them down or firing staff and bringing in a private organization to run a school under the turnaround model.

"If they have the money, why don't they just put that money into resources that we're asking for, instead of bringing the turnaround?" said Kim Hemphill, a parent at Herzl School, which is also slated for a takeover.

Hemphill said Herzl staff should be allowed to remain because a new principal and newly hired teachers have helped raise student scores this past year.

Protesters march along South Hamlin Avenue on Monday to protest potential school closings.

TERRENCE ANTONIO JAMES/TRIBUNE

Herzl and Marquette are among 10 schools CPS has marked for turnaround this year, the largest number of schools targeted for staff overhaul at one time to date. Another seven schools are proposed for closing.

CPS spokeswoman Becky Carroll said the district proposed the closings and turnarounds because with only 57 percent of students graduating from high school, "we must take action now to provide them with access to higher performing schools."

ELSEWHERE

In another Chicago event honoring King on Monday, Gov. Quinn joined several politicians at a breakfast hosted by the Rainbow PUSH Coalition, which raised scholarship money for students across the country.

The governor said it was a fitting cause to honor the late civil rights leader, who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

"We know that Dr. King was an educated man, he believed in education, he believed in children and going to school," Quinn said. "And so giving money here today for scholarships, I think, is a very important cause."

Bye bye, Barbie?

Iranian shops selling doll despite crackdown

4 TEHRAN Iran's morality police are cracking down on the sale of Barbie dolls to protect the public from what they see as pernicious Western culture eroding Islamic values, shopkeepers said Monday.

As the West imposes the toughest ever sanctions on Iran and tensions rise over its nuclear program, the Barbie ban is part of what the government calls a "soft war" against decadent cultural influences.

"About three weeks ago they [the morality police] came to our shop, asking us to remove all the Barbies," said a shopkeeper in a toy shop in northern Tehran.

Iran's religious rulers first declared Barbie un-Islamic in 1996, citing its "destructive cultural and social consequences." Despite the ban, the doll has until recently been openly on sale in Tehran shops.

The new order, issued around three weeks ago, forced shopkeepers to hide the leggy, busty blonde behind other toys as a way of meeting popular demand for the dolls while avoiding being closed down by the police.

A range of officially approved dolls launched in 2002 to counter demand for Barbie have not proved successful, merchants told Reuters. The dolls named Sara, a female, and Dara, a male, arrived in shops wearing a variety of traditional dress.

"My daughter prefers Barbies. She says Sara and Dara are ugly and fat," said Farnaz, a 38-year-old mother.

Pointing to a doll covered in black long veil, a 40-year-old Tehran toy shop manager said: "We still sell Barbies but secretly and put these in the window to make the police think we are just selling these kinds of dolls."

6 Rivals gang up on Romney

Mitt Romney's four remaining challengers for the Republican presidential nomination tried hard Monday to topple the front-runner, attacking his record on voting rights for felons, his failure to release income tax records and his experience as a financial executive. Romney was under fire from the start of this 16th Republican campaign debate, held at the Myrtle Beach Convention Center Journal.

1 We're down to the final four in the NFL. Predictions, please.

Eli wins a second Super Bowl—one more than his brother. Peyton's already bulbous head explodes.

Super Bowl MVP will be the story of a man named Brady.

I predict Patriots vs. Giants, Part 2 and waaay too many mentions of David Tyree.

Ravens over Patriots; 49ers over Giants; Tom Brady rival Terrell Suggs over Gisele Bündchen.

Jack never should've bought those beans, because the Giants can't be stopped.

2 What could the Bears learn from the NFL teams still playing?

You need a big-play receiver or tight end. Whatever led you to Roy Williams, do the opposite.

It's not against national law to play into late January.

Pass-catching tight ends are really, really important. I miss you, Greg Olsen.

Jay Cutler could learn how to get a haircut from Brady.

How to just demolish two teams' dreams at once. N.Y. made us and Green Bay look bad.

3 What's the best thing about a noon Bulls tipoff?

Lunch-a-Bulls!

I get to watch Kobe take his divorce out on the NBA later on. #lovethisgame

It freed up my night for the premiere of "Alcatraz"!

Rose still hurt? Oops, I guess I slept through the game.

By the time that long hand reaches 2 the game may as well be over.

4 The Bulls are among the NBA's best, with two major injuries. How good can they be?

As good as the Miami Heat think they are.

Even with those injuries they will definitely win the East. We're talking about Wade and LeBron being hurt, right?

Good enough to make a certain Miami Heat forward shake in his LeBron 9s.

Any answer including the words "three-peat" or "Jordan" are disqualified. Except mine.

Hopefully they're good enough to let me avoid rush-hour traffic at an early game.

5 Just a few weeks until spring training. How's that make you feel?

Like Theo Epstein's honeymoon period's going to be shorter than Kim Kardashian's.

I already got yelled at out of a car in Wrigleyville, so I feel like baseball is about to start soon.

Like a lactose-intolerant person driving past Mars' Cheese Castle: indifferent.

Weary of impending optimism for the Cubs.

Ugh, guess it's just a matter of time until "Baseball Wives" shows up then. Yippee.

Can Chiropractic Help Me? HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

We are often asked, "What's the best way of finding out whether or not a doctor of chiropractic can help my problem?"

We believe the answer can be found in a complete chiropractic consultation and examination, including x-rays.

And to help find out for sure, we will do a complete consultation and examination, including x-rays, if necessary, (procedures that normally cost $390 or more) for only $25.

We will make this special program available through January 31, 2012.

The only exception to the offer is Medicare and Medicaid.

$25.00 Reg. $390 Value

Must present ad at time of appointment.

YOUR INITIAL VISIT WILL INCLUDE:

- A Private consultation with the doctor.
- X-rays, if necessary.
- A thorough spinal examination including orthopedic & neurological test.
- A confidential report of our findings.
- An explanation of our treatment procedure if we determine chiropractic can help you.
- A REFERRAL TO THE PROPER SPECIALIST IF WE DETERMINE CHIROPRACTIC CAN'T HELP YOU.

THESE CONDITIONS ARE SOME OF THE DANGER SIGNALS:

- Headache
- Arthritic pain by stiff neck
- Loss of sleep
- Scoliosis (Curvature of the spine)
- Leg pain & numbness
- Arm pain & numbness
- Backache
- Fatigue
- Tension
- Whiplash injury

If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, call our office today for an appointment.

Romo, Woods will reportedly pair up at Pebble Beach Pro-Am

RedEye

I guess that Tim Tebow thing didn't work out.

A week after rumors of a Tiger Woods-Tebow pairing at the Pebble Beach Pro-Am, espn.com reported Monday that Woods instead will be paired with Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo.

Sounds like a perfect match if you ask us. Here's why.

Tony Romo

Tony & the Tiger

TONY ROMO	TIGER WOODS

Prepare for more Tebow time

If you got sick of hearing about Tim Tebow this season, you're not going to like next NFL season. The Denver Broncos declared Monday that Tebow would be the team's starter in 2012. Broncos chief of football operations John Elway, a Hall of Fame quarterback, pledged to work with Tebow on his technique. That'll be a lot of work, John.

Rose a finalist for Olympic team

Bulls guard Derrick Rose is part of Team USA's preliminary 20-man basketball roster announced Monday, and he says he wouldn't miss it even if the Bulls go on a long playoff run. "Nah, I'm good," he said. "I'm young. That's something you can't miss." The final roster will be unveiled in June.

IT'S 9 O'CLOCK TUESDAY—WHAT ARE YOU WATCHING?

Basic cable TV programmers aren't making our viewing lives easy Tuesday, when three outstanding series return at 9 p.m.

And although "Justified," "Southland" and "White Collar" tell the stories of law enforcers and the criminals they fight, they couldn't be more different. The Southern-fried "Justified" packs so much quiet menace into an hour you might need a drink to calm your nerves. "Southland" puts you on the shoulders of the L.A. police officers trying to keep their sanity while working their beats and homicide cases. The caper series "White Collar" plays things a lot lighter, but it's entertaining and fun.

So which one should you watch live and which should you DVR? Thankfully, the cablers air these shows multiple times, but here's my take on how you should plan your Tuesday nights.

!!!! Southland

9 p.m. Tuesday, TNT

How to watch: Watch this ratings-challenged series live—especially if you're a Nielsen viewer.

TV's most underrated current drama launches a fourth season of L.A.-based cop stories churning with chases, murders and a police station confrontation so violent and realistic you'll feel like you experienced it firsthand.

The beauty of this little show that came from Ann Biderman ("NYPD Blue"), Christopher Chulack ("Third Watch") and John Wells ("Shameless") is that no matter how electric the action is, "Southland" takes the time to powerfully reveal the lives and emotions of the LAPD officers involved.

Lucy Liu and Lou Diamond Phillips guest star this season and make an impact from the word go. Liu's Officer Tang is paired up with Michael Cudlitz's Cooper, who is out of rehab and is feeling fit after his back surgery. Phillips' Officer Ferguson runs afoul of Ben McKenzie's Sherman with his cynical attitude.

As perfectly cast as the guest stars are, the core players—Cudlitz, McKenzie, Shawn Hatosy and especially Regina King—keep us coming back for more. They bring as much raw emotion and honesty to their roles as Biderman brings authenticity to chronicling the gritty details of being a cop. "Southland" brims with plot twists that never, ever feel contrived.

It would be crime not to watch this series.

!!!! White Collar

9 p.m. Tuesday, USA

How to watch: Catch it when you can.

"White Collar" remains pure, escapist fun as it resumes its third season.

When we last visited New York City, we weren't really sure if con man Neal Caffrey (Matt Bomer, right) was going back to his old ways after snatching stolen art treasures with his con man crony Mozzie (Willie Garson). Neither was his FBI agent partner/handler, Peter Burke (Tim DeKay). Neal's nemesis, Matthew Keller (Ross McCall), returned to claim the treasure for himself and to get it he kidnapped Peter's wife, Elizabeth (Tiffani Thiessen).

The search for Elizabeth heats up Tuesday, but Peter's understandably having trust issues when it comes to Neal. Creator Jeff Eastin keeps viewers guessing in clever, enjoyable ways.

PRIME TIME

Justified 9 p.m. Tuesday, FX

How to watch: I'll DVR.

"Justified" creator Graham Yost was in a terrible pickle when it came time to work on Season 3 of his critically acclaimed series: What do you do when you've killed off one the greatest baddies ever?

You find not one, but two major villains to trouble the ever-so-cool U.S. Marshal Raylan Givens (Timothy Olyphant, above). Oh, make that three; Raylan's nemesis/friend Boyd Crowder (Walton Goggins) hasn't left the Kentucky backwoods.

Boyd is making a play for the Harlan County marijuana trade that was once run by Mags Bennett (Emmy winner Margo Martindale) and the wider drug business, but he's not the only one. A carpetbagger from Detroit named Quarles (Neal McDonough) has his eye on the whole of eastern Kentucky, which is sure to bring him into conflict with both Raylan and Boyd. Plus, a mysterious man named Limehouse (Mykelti Williamson) from Noble's Holler owes a favor to Mags, so he's watching her son Dickie's (Jeremy Davies) back.

To say Raylan's sitting on a powder keg would be underselling it. Based on a novella by Elmore Leonard, "Justified" explodes with superb writing, complex characters and rich acting.

Even without Mags, "Justified" drags us once again into the murky morality of the people of Harlan County.

whoville THE DIGIT 16.8 MILLION

That's how many people tuned in to the Golden Globes on Sunday, according to ew.com. The number is down 1 percent from last year.

THAT WAS GOLDEN

FORGET THE AWARDS—AND MOST OF US ALREADY HAVE—DID YOU SEE ZOOEY'S NAILS?

RedEye

Would Ricky Gervais be meaner than ever in his third turn as host of the Golden Globe Awards? No. That's one lesson we took away from Sunday's show in L.A. Here are the answers to five more burning questions from the first big show of Hollywood's awards season.

Gosling
LOS ANGELES TIMES FILE

Where was Ryan Gosling?

The REAL sexiest man alive—sorry, Bradley Cooper—was a no-show despite his nomination for "Ides of March." What's with that? "He's in Thailand or something," "Ides" co-star George Clooney said backstage. "He's gotta earn a living. He's a struggling actor." OK, maybe that mystery isn't all the way solved.

How is Zooey Deschanel?

The "New Girl" star began the year by filing for divorce from Death Cab for Cutie frontman Ben Gibbard, but if she's got the blues, it certainly didn't show Sunday. Deschanel stepped out in a daring green top and then posted a photo of her bowtie-and-button-blinged nails. One of a kind, that woman.

Do the awards matter?

Real talk? Nobody cares who wins these awards. Well, except Elton John's husband, David Furnish, who was incensed when Madonna bested John for best original song in a film. "Madonna winning Best Original Song truly shows how these awards have nothing to do with merit," Furnish ranted on Facebook, according to people.com. Tell us something we don't know, David. Who is Martin Henderson?

During his acceptance speech for his work on "Game of Thrones," Peter Dinklage said, "Martin Henderson, I'm thinking of you ... Google him." We did, and ... oh, what a horrible story. Henderson is a fellow dwarf actor who was hurt when a drunken stranger picked him up and threw him onto the ground outside a pub in England. Henderson says he hasn't been able to walk properly since the incident. GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

What was on Jessica Biel's ring finger?

Absolutely nothing. While the woman who reportedly is engaged to Justin Timberlake walked the red carpet in earrings worth almost $250,000, people.com reports, the key digit remained conspicuously naked. We'll just go with People's theory that the reported engagement ring clashed with her outfit.

$2,100

« That's the low, low price per night for a stay at the two-story mansion in Sonoma County, Calif., where the current season of "The Bachelor" was filmed, according to a listing on zillow.com. The six-bedroom "Bachelor" pad comfortably accommodates 12 (desperate women) and includes a pool, views of the valley and, of course, a hot tub.

Buggin' out

After the birth of Blue Ivy, daddy Jay-Z is dropping the B-word, and Beyoncé got a little more fly. Hova released a poem dedicated to his new daughter, nme.com reports, vowing to eliminate "bitch" from his vocab. Meanwhile, a scientist has named a newly discovered species of horsefly Scaptia (Plinthina) beyonceae (pictured) in a tribute to Queen B. The Associated Press reports. The fly has golden-haired booty, naturally.

I'm really done this time. It's enough. Three is plenty—at least that's what Charlie Sheen told me."

Game on

There will be more romance on the HBO fantasy series "Game of Thrones" when it returns in April for its second season—and there will be plenty more gore, show runner David Benioff promised Sunday to mtv.com. "A lot of bloodshed, as [fans are] used to," he said. "More romance, I think, than Season 1. There are some great love stories starting up."

—Golden Globes host Ricky Gervais, to deadline.com. Turn to Page 22 for more reaction from Sunday's show.

Quentin & answer

The Academy Awards are more than a month away, but we still can debate the year's best movies with the help of some experts. Enter Quentin Tarantino. What did the director of movies such as "Inglourious Basterds" and "Reservoir Dogs" like in 2011? Here is his Top 5 list, ew.com reports.

1. 'Midnight in Paris'

2. 'Rise Of The Planet Of The Apes'

3. 'Moneyball'

4. 'The Skin I Live In'

5. 'X-Men: First Class'

Vamp of approval

Bella and Edward on the small screen? Yep, it could happen. When asked if the "Twilight" franchise could live on after "Breaking Dawn Part 2," possibly as a TV show, a Lions Gate exec told the Los Angeles Times: "I would certainly hope so." Just what TV viewers need—another vamp-themed show.

'They're alive'

When RedEye talked to "The Walking Dead" star Norman Reedus in December, he gave us a little teaser about what to expect when the season resumes Feb. 12. "A lot of action," he said. In a new AMC sneak peek from the episode "Nebraska," Rick and Hershel are interrupted by two strangers and one declares, "Son of a bitch, they're alive." Sounds ominous.
